Work plan

The work plan fits into the activities of the project “The Socioeconomic Effects of Return Migration”, Reference 2022.01500.PTDC, coordinated by Professor João Pereira dos Santos.

SERM aims at identifying and quantifying the short and the long-term socioeconomic effects of return migration, by exploiting an unprecedented historical episode of forced population repatriation linked to a major event in European modern history. It leverages on comprehensive micro-level data from population censuses and other administrative sources, and relies on several methods from economics and computer science. SERM combines the motivation of a young scholar with the close mentorship of experienced economists and social scientists.

We will exploit several state-of-the art methods in economics and computer science to measure the causal effects of return migration from different angles. Research Tasks & Responsibilities:

- Collect and extract quantitative data from administrative registers or surveys, as relevant to evaluate the impact of policies on a variety of outcomes.
- Conduct literature reviews to scope and pitch new research and analysis
- Develop collaborative research with other project colleagues and research group;
- Present research outputs at non-academic conferences and other dissemination groups.

Place of work

The activities related to the grant will be developed at UECE/ISEG, Lisbon School of Economics and Management, under the supervision of Professor João Pereira dos Santos.

Duration

The duration of the scholarship is 4 (four) months.

Monthly stipend

1 259,64€ (tax-free for Portuguese residents) This stipend is paid under the terms of the table in Appendix I of the FCT Research Grant Regulation, under exclusive dedication according to Article 5 of the Research Scholarship Statute.

Payment of the monthly maintenance allowance is made at the end of each month by bank transfer.

Selection Methods and Criteria

Candidates are assessed through Curriculum Assessment (CA) and Motivation Letter (ML).

The results are expressed on a scale from 0 (zero) to 100 (hundred).

The final weighting formula is $CA*0,5 + ML*0,5$.

Only candidates with a total score above 80 (eighty) will be admitted to the final list.

The Curriculum Assessment must demonstrate suitability for the work to be performed and will consider the following aspects:

- Academic education;
- Classification obtained in subjects considered relevant to the work to be performed;
- Interest and experience in Economic history and migration economics

The Motivation Letter must explain the interest in the specific area of the project, in research activities integrated in multidisciplinary teams and the candidate's expectations for academic and personal development.
